I'm Edward Smart (Mumbler), a proud Yuin/Dunghutti man with a deep-rooted connection to my heritage. My great-great-grandfather, "King Biamanga" John Mumbler Yuin, was a revered leader in the Yuin community. My great-grandfather, Edward Mumbler, and my grandfather, Edward James Mumbler, were both vital connectors between our people and the outside world, advocating for our community's future. I continue that legacy by building relationships, opening doors, and ensuring Indigenous businesses are an integral part of the industry, upholding my family's tradition of leadership and cultural significance.

With 26 years of experience in the construction industry, I have built a strong career grounded in practical expertise, a commitment to quality, and a deep respect for the land and community. My work reflects not only my extensive knowledge of construction but also the values of sustainability and cultural awareness passed down through my family.

As a descendant of significant Aboriginal leaders, I blend traditional values with a modern approach, contributing to the growth and recognition of both my cultural identity and professional achievements.

"My passion lies in creating opportunities, preserving and sharing culture, and driving innovation in business and technology.

I'm deeply invested in Indigenous empowerment and storytelling, whether through HivePM's engagement with communities, CultureStream's digital media projects, or exploring Indigenous herbal remedies in a new venture with my children. I want to build platforms that celebrate and uplift First Nations people, making a real impact. With over 26 years in construction and project management, I'm driven to grow sustainable businesses, form meaningful partnerships, and create long-term opportunities—especially for Indigenous engagement in the industry. But I'm not just focused on construction; I see innovation as a key part of the future. My interest in VR, spatial computing, and immersive storytelling comes from a desire to push boundaries and engage people in new, powerful ways. At the heart of everything I do, I'm determined to carve out new paths, challenge norms, and make a lasting impact."
